The Monza was available as a 2door coupe, a 3door hatchback and a 3door wagon using the same body as the discontinued Vega wagon, the model it replaced. The inexpensive Chevette was retained even as sales declined, and was formally replaced by even smaller captive imports. Both previous platforms had reardrive layouts while the new design followed the front wheel drive trend, as in the Dodge Omni and Honda Civic. Ford and Chrysler also introduced new front drive compacts. The small Cavalier even helped fill in lagging sales of the compact Citation.Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. April 2014 Learn how and when to remove this template message The Cavalier name originated from GMs thenBritish subsidiary Vauxhall, who applied it to badge engineered variants of the Opel Ascona, the third generation of which was the first Jbody car to be released.The 1984 models received a mild facelift featuring quad headlights.

Z24 was introduced in 1985 for 1986 model year coupe and hatchback configurations.After that time, the Cavaliers sold there featured Sunbird body panels, as opposed to USspec Cavalier panels. From 1993 on, the sibling marques were both offered, much in the same way as in the United States.This resulted in different trunk designs for the coupe and sedan. Three trim levels were available for 1988 VL, RS, and Z24. The convertible was only available as a Z24. An electronic dashboard was available with the RS and Z24 trims.The new selfaligning steering wheel was designed so as to reduce injuries in a collision by bending to conform to the drivers chest. Also, rear shoulder belts became standard on all models. RS and Z24 custom cloth seating received a new style of front bucket seats with integral headrests.Doormounted automatic front seatbelts were added due to US passive restraint legislation. However, the Beretta convertible was shelved at the eleventh hour, before a 1990 Cavalier convertible could be prepared.Most notably, the cooling system was redesigned to draw air from the bumper, giving it a Ford Taurus style bumper and grilleless nose. The new bumpers were unpainted, with the option to have them colored grey, black or white; the latter only available on whitelabeled models. The RS and the Z24 eschewed this for a color keyed body package. Z24 models also gained the options for a height adjustable drivers seat and a CD player.The lock system was intended to be a stronger deterrent to vehicle theft, but constant problems were reported with the lock jamming. It was dropped after an improved dualbit single key system was introduced for the 1995 model year and redesign. Antilock brakes were added as a standard feature, as Delco Moraine had managed to develop a lowcost system.

Power locks were also standard, and were designed to automatically lock when the car is shifted out of park, or if the car is traveling at least 8 miles per hour in manual transmission equipped Coupe models. Some of the basic styling cues remained however, such as the bumper-integrated grille, the coupes dipped beltline, and the charcoal-colored bumpers on some base model cars. Coupe, sedan, and convertible options were offered, however the wagon model was discontinued. The car now had the available option of 15 and 16 inch wheels. By 1997, the Cavalier became the best selling car within the entire GM lineup. The option for a V6 engine, which had been available in the first and second generation, was dropped and replaced by a new four-cylinder of similar power output. Base and RS models still retained the 2.2L pushrod four-cylinder engine 2.2 L OHV of the previous models, which was primarily mated to a 3-speed automatic, but was available with 5-speed Manual in the two-door models, in particular the RS models. As of 1996 a new 4-speed automatic became available in any trim. The Z24 and LS convertible used the 2.3 L LD2 Quad4 engine in 1995, but they received a new engine in 1996, the 2.4 liter DOHC LD9. This engine could also be special ordered on a 4-door LS model. This engine produced 150 hp 112 kW and 155 lbft 210 Nm of torque and was used until 2002. The Z24 only came in two-door coupe models until 2001 and featured a sport-tuned suspension, 16-inch tires, alloy wheels and improved interior electronics. Aesthetically little changed from the other models other than a ground effects kit and taller rear spoiler. In 2000 a 4-door Z24 Sedan debuted, featuring the same mechanics but having a less sporty body. The Z24 trim also received several other upgrades including a wider front sway bar and FE2 Sports Suspension for better handling characteristics, and less aggressive ABS antilock braking system.

Also, the RS was replaced by the LS Sport line, which featured the new Ecotec L61 motors 140 hp 104 kW and 150 lbft 200 Nm torque. These engines improved fuel economy, featuring the same displacement as the GM 122 Pushrod Engine 2.2 L OHV while maintaining most of the power of the older LD9 motors. The new Ecotec motors replaced the GM 122 Pushrod Engine 2.2 L OHV in base models in 2003, and became the sole engine choice in the entire Cavalier lineup until 2005 when the Chevrolet Cavalier was replaced by the Chevrolet Cobalt. The supercharger kit was developed and tested by General Motors and could only be installed at a GM dealer. This upgrade increased performance considerably due to a pressure of 4.7 PSI which in turn added approximately 40 hp 30 kW and 40 lbft 54 Nm of torque increase; raising the Z24s ratings to approximately 190 hp 142 kW and 195 lbft 264 Nm of torque. Interior seats were often flecked with color, and the rear seat had a fold-down armrest. Vehicles produced from February through December 1998 were available with a leather interior equipped with an automatic transmission only. TRD made a body kit and rear wing for the Cavalier, available exclusively in Japan. The car was sold only at Toyota Store Japanese dealerships. Prices for the coupe started at 2 million yen for the coupe, and 1.81 million yen for the sedan. When the decision was made to sell the Cavalier as a Toyota, this disrupted operations at Yanase. When the Toyota Cavalier was cancelled, Yanase continued to sell Chevrolet and other GM products. Yanase also provides complete maintenance services for all vehicles sold. Production of the Toyota Cavalier ceased in June 2000. This car was discontinued in 2005, the last Cavalier rolled off the assembly line on October 6, 2005. It was developed on the same platform as the first generation Cruze, the Delta II platform, and uses the 1.5 liter four-cylinder engine that powers many compact GM models in China, including the Chevrolet Sail.

Its pricing sets the Cavalier exactly between the smaller Sail and the more modern second generation Cruze. Deliveries started in September, with almost 10,000 units sold in its first month, but there are indications the Cavalier cannibalizes sales of the similarly priced first generation Cruze, which continues to be sold in China. 0 out of 5 stars The only downside is that this mirror so shiny and new that one could tell I was a freaking moron and struck an object and subsequently needed to replace the mirror. I digress.Super easy to take off the old one and put this new one on. Mirror looks the same as my other one, nothing was wrong with it. Would def buy again!
