Is there someone out there who modded one of these player by themselves and could share some info with me. I have the service manual but unfortunately lacking the skills to figure out how to mod it myself. Id appreciate any input on this, KrisztianI designed a set of mods for this player that were marketed by Townshend Audio. This dropped the clock noise floor by 20db. This transformed the player. However the DV 565 is a better candidate for modding with a superior clock arrangement and in my opinion better sounding DACs. The Sorensen HPX High Power Extensible, Programmable DC Series delivers unsurpassed quality and reliable lownoise performance, fast and precise programmability with premium features, all in a convenient rackmount cabinet with casters. The HPX also includes Remote Sense for correcting errors from line voltage drops. Sophisticated power conversion technology, with stateofheart FETbased high frequency switching technology provides accuracy, exceptional load transient response and low noise in a smaller footprint as compared to other technologies. My setup will consist of RF82s and my RSW12 from my last setup; Im wondering what you all think of the VSX80TXV and the DV46AV. I was originally going to go with the VSX1016TXV and the DV490V. Any opinions on these products would be appreciated. As I recall, I listened to one at Hope 06 and thought it sounded pretty good. I dont remember the model numbers, but the Elite carried a significantly higher price. I ordered the service manual from Pioneer and found out that the same manual covered both the Elite and the standard Pioneer versions. The schematic showed IDENTICAL parts between the two same part numbers, too, except for one additional feature that the Elite had a second zone feed. So, at least at that time, I paid a lot of money for a prettier black finish on the cabinet. Perhaps things have changed since then; perhaps not. Ive had it for about a year and a half with no problems. It will play louder than I care to hear, no complaints from me. And even though the hk is rated at much less wattage, it has more power than the pioneer.

As far as the elite goes, I havent tried one out yet, but the one you are talking about is only one step up from the 1016. Im running rf62s, very similiar speakers to yours and i think you will enjoy the sound of a hk receiver much better! As far as quality with Klipschorns it sounds very good indeed. I also just bought an open box DV45A. I did want the HDMI DVD player oh well, I might not make it to HD till the prices drop. I will say that so far the pioneer elite DVD player has the best picture I have seen so far. I did not get the manuals to these units so I downloaded from pioneer. Each manual was 88 pages so if you do this have ink ready LOL. I like the piano black finish, I wish they would have kept the cherry wood sides on them.
