A large number of those have come from outside the UK, which is why we thought we'd give you the lowdown on qualifying from overseas. This will change things for both domestic and overseas candidates, as overseas lawyers will need to pass this exam to practice in England and Wales. The SRA recently appointed Kaplan, which administers the QLTS, as the assessor for the SQE. You can read more about the Solicitors Qualifying Examination here.

This was done for various reasons partly to reflect recent changes in legal education and regulation, and partly to make the testing of foreign lawyers entering the market tighter and more thorough. The QLTT was basically only designed for EU and Commonwealth citizens, but the QLTS can be completed by individuals from many more jurisdictions including Russia, China and several South American countries. Unlike the old system, the QLTS no longer requires applicants to have two years experience practising English or common law. Instead, they undertake a series of assessments. A qualified lawyer is someone with rights of audience who is recognised as an officer of the court and whose qualification was awarded as part of a generalist legal education and training. So, the QLTS is for individuals who are already practising law as professionals, not those who have just completed a law degree overseas and are seeking to enter the profession. Regulations prohibit Kaplan from offering preparatory training for the assessments, so this task is left to other course providers including BPP, QLTS School, and City Law School. You can find more information on QLTS assessments, rules and deadlines on Kaplans website. To be eligible for the QLTS barristers must have completed a pupillage. In order to become a solicitor, BPTC graduates now have to take the LPC from which they are granted certain exemptions. That said, if your English isn't up to scratch, you're likely to struggle. The MCT assessment is divided into two sessions of nearly three hours each, with 90 questions in each session. It is delivered online and can be taken in the UK as well as in other major cities around the world. The practice areas covered are business law; civil and criminal litigation; and property and probate law. The OSCE runs across several days and is offered in the UK only. The exam fee is 2,925 plus VAT. More information on the content of the assessments is available on Kaplan's website.

Applicants who fail on the first go are no longer limited to three attempts at each part. It is possible to retake the assessment as many times as you want so long as you pay the appropriate fee. There is no time limit for completing the two parts of the assessment within a certain time period. This may change, however, if the UK leaves the EU without a deal. In such instance, EEA lawyers may need to do the same as lawyers from other jurisdictions pass all the components of the assessments without the possibility of exemptions. As the QLTS is a relatively new system, do keep an eye out for any changes which might be made to it in the near future. If this is your background you probably need to follow a different route into the profession. If you have a law degree from an overseas institution, you can in some circumstances apply to the SRA for Equivalent Means, which can grant exemption from qualification and training requirements such as the LPC, Common Professional Examination CPE and Period of Recognised Training PRT. This period is known as a training contract. Much of the rest of this website is concerned with the many different training contracts that are available why not have a look around Dont forget that all the usual application timetables apply with large commercial firms recruiting two years or more in advance. At the same time other sources said they would expect those whove done the QLTS to apply for experienced lawyer vacancies within the firm provided they have previous work experience as a lawyer. Either way, if youre interested in a specific firm its worth asking them what their approach to the QLTS and overseasqualified lawyers and overseas students is. Linklaters, for example, sends staff to both India and Australia to look for talented young lawyers, as it sees the whole world as its recruiting stage. You can read more on Linklaters graduate recruitment website about its Indian, Australian and African clerkship and internship programmes.

But, as an international candidate, what are your chances of building a successful legal career. And whats the visa situation All agreed that arranging visas can be tricky, and we wont go into detail here about the different tiers of visa, the requirements for obtaining them, or dealing with the Home Office. We will simply give a general overview of the situation. No rights can be obtained from the information below. Thats especially true of large international firms in London. A recruiter at a midsize international firm in the City told us "In both our first and secondyear trainee cohorts we have one individual who we have given visa support to and we have one such person in our intake next year too." A recruiter at a large international firm which recruits 50 trainees a year confided that they can recruit a maximum of three trainees who require visa support each year. Plus, having an international background can be a bonus. One recruiter revealed "Many international students struggle to make good applications, as they often do not understand what we are looking for or do not understand how English law firms work." So make sure you do your research. They do not have dedicated visa teams and may ask themselves if were only recruiting a handful of trainees why bother going to all the effort. After all, they get plenty of good applications from UK and EU candidates, so its just easier to pick one of them. In addition, it is at present administratively easier for a firm to offer you visa support if you start a traineeship immediately after being a student ie after completing the LPC. Both of these factors mean that the best course of action is to successfully apply for a traineeship while you are still studying. Dont forget that most top law firms recruit two years in advance! Many Tier 4 student visas allow you to work for up to ten or 20 hours a week during term time, but for an unlimited amount of time outside of termtime.

However, a 12month Tier 4 student visa is typically valid for four months after the end of your course, so doing a summer vac scheme should be possible. So if you want to do a vac scheme at a firm in the UK but then return to your own country to start your fulltime career, firms will not look positively on your application. A firm will want to recruit people onto its vac scheme who can and want to be a trainee there too. And you have to sell yourself when you apply remember to make your international experience and background shine on your application. Elsewhere on this website you can read more about vacation schemes. Pupils can also be supported by individual chambers, but a leading commercial Chancery set told us that theyd expect sponsorship to be organised by the Bar Council rather than individual sets. Getting a pupillage is very tough though and only the best of the best succeed. Elsewhere on this website you can read more about a career at the Bar. The UKs exit from the EU will change how immigration from the rest of Europe to the UK works. EU nationals living in the UK now have to apply for settled status and this will allow them to continue working on British soil. This does require that the individual has lived in the UK for at least five years you can find more information here. Free movement would continue up to that point. For those EU nationals moving to the UK after that date, their visa situation will depend directly on the agreement reached between the UK and EU on the free movement of people. The current plan would also provide for the recognition of professional qualifications. We imagine that would include qualified lawyers, but the details aren't set in stone and Boris Johnson's administration may move in a different direction altogether.

A no-deal Brexit would negate this transition period, meaning the UK takes control of its own borders, and must decide on the status of EU citizens in the UK from 31 October 2019, or whenever the UK leaves the EU. It's anybody's guess what the immigration situation would look like in that scenario. Brexit negotiations are ongoing, and provided a departure deal is reached they will continue after the UK leaves the EU to determine the future relationship between the two parties. So if you are an EU national who wants to live and work in the UK in the future make sure you read the news and do your research on the future status of EU citizens in the UK. Their wisdom will help you make good choices. Freshfields' transactional experts to explain what they do. Tuition varies depending on a chosen campus location. The QLTT was basically only designed for EU and Commonwealth citizens, but the QLTS can be completed by individuals from many more jurisdictions including Russia, China and several South American countries. Unlike the old system, the QLTS no longer requires applicants to have two years' experience practising English or common law. Instead, they undertake a series of assessments. To be eligible for the QLTS you need to be a qualified lawyer in an SRA recognised jurisdiction and have followed the full route to qualification. A qualified lawyer is someone with rights of audience who is recognised as an officer of the court and whose qualification was awarded as part of a generalist legal education and training. So, the QLTS is for individuals who are already practising law as professionals, not those who have completed a law degree overseas and are seeking to enter the profession. The SRA has appointed Kaplan Law School as the sole provider of the QLTS assessments. Regulations prohibit Kaplan from offering preparatory training for the assessments, so this task is left to other course providers including BPP, QLTS School, and City Law School. You can find more information on QLTS assessments, rules and deadlines on Kaplan's website. The QLTS assessments After taking the test, the SRA will make inquiries into your character, suitability and whether you are qualified in your home jurisdiction. Non-native English speakers no longer need to satisfy any English language requirement in order to be eligible to sit the assessment. That said, if your English isn't up to scratch, you're likely to struggle. The QLTS assessment is divided into two parts Part one, a multiple choice test MCT covering 11 areas the English legal system and EU law; constitutional law and judicial review; professional conduct and solicitors' accounts; regulatory and fiscal issues; contract law; torts; criminal law; land law; equitable rights; human rights; and business structures and legal personality.

The MCT assessment is divided into two sessions of nearly three hours each, with 90 questions in each session. More information on the content of the assessments is available on Kaplan's website. Applicants need to pass the MCT before progressing to the OSCE. Applicants who fail on the first go are no longer limited to three attempts at each part. There is no time limit for completing the two parts of the assessment within a certain time period. Lawyers from the European Economic Area EEA are individually assessed on the basis of the QLTS's competency requirements, to determine whether there are components of the QLTS assessments which they can be exempted from. Lawyers from other jurisdictions must pass all the components of the assessments and cannot apply for exemptions. The SRA website provides a lot more information on assessments, qualifying jurisdictions and the QLTS in general. As the QLTS is a relatively new system, do keep an eye out for any changes which might be made to it in the near future. We will equip you with more than just legal knowledge we focus on the all-around legal skills and commercial awareness employers are seeking. \n The Postgraduate Diploma in Legal Practice, known as the Legal Practice Course LPC is your bridge between the academic world and professional life in a law firm.

It is no coincidence that BPP University's LPC is the first choice of many leading law firms who exclusively send their trainees to study with us. Created in conjunction with leading law firms, our LPC is innovative, dynamic and market-leading. \n To ensure you get the most from your LPC, we teach in small groups delivered by experienced tutors who are qualified lawyers. We believe in offering a high level of tutorstudent interaction and, throughout your studies, you will have the support of a dedicated personal tutor and can sign up for onetoone mentoring. \n Free Masters top up \n Why walk away with the standard LPC when you can top up your Postgraduate Diploma to our LLM Commercial Legal Practice or LLM Professional Legal Practice for free \n Develop the advanced commercial and business acumen that firms demand and ensure that you stand out from the crowd with our LLM Commercial Legal Practice. In addition to the Postgraduate Diploma in Legal Practice, you will complete two additional business modules which will enable you to develop an advanced understanding of the business and strategic environment in which clients and law firms operate and the skills to use this knowledge within legal practice. \n Alternatively, convert your Postgraduate Diploma to a full Masters degree in as little as 15 weeks with our LLM Professional Legal Practice. To do it, you need to complete one research project. Together, we'll draw up a career action plan which details the steps you should take to achieve your career goals. \n You'll also be allocated an LPC tutor who can advise you prior to your course commencing. Their professional experience can benefit you if you are looking to apply for training contracts before starting on the LPC programme. \n Employability Week \n This is a great opportunity for you to develop your professional skills and to improve your personal brand to prepare you for your legal career.

All LLM Legal Practice students will be timetabled to attend three compulsory workshops which offer essential tips on how to handle the first week in a law firm and develop your commercial awareness. In addition, you will have the opportunity to attend a wide range a number of optional workshops designed and delivered in conjunction with leading law firms. \n Flexible options to fit your lifestyle \n You can choose to study your LPC fulltime, parttime or on a fasttrack basis. There are three start dates throughout the year in January, August, and September, depending on your chosen mode of study, so you can begin your studies at a time that suits you. \n Fulltime and parttime \n Our fulltime and parttime programmes are designed to fit your lifestyle. Depending on which center you choose and your start date, you can select from various modes and timetable options at some centers. Our fulltime programme allows you to study over two, three or four days a week and our parttime programme is designed to fit around your other commitments such as work and family, with the day, evening, and weekend options and all lectures delivered online for maximum flexibility. \n Fasttrack London only \n BPP University was the first provider to offer a fasttrack LPC. Available over seven months, rather than nine, it offers the same high levels of face-to-face contact, condensed into a shorter period. This option is more intensive than our standard fulltime LPC and, because it covers the same material in less time, fasttrack students have two additional hours of face-to-face teaching and approximately three hours extra preparation a week. \n Please note, timetables are subject to availability and vary between center and mode. \n How the programme is taught \n Online learning materials \n All of our fulltime and parttime LPC students have access to high-quality online lectures in a variety of formats for you to watch as many times as you wish for both preparation and revision.

A version of every LPC tutorial session which we call a 'small group session' is also available online, so you can consolidate and revise whenever and wherever you choose. \n Small group sessions \n Starting your professional practice \n At the start of each module, you will be provided with a comprehensive materials pack containing chapter lecture handouts and Small Group Session SGS descriptions. Each module is then delivered through online lectures, SGSs, and independent private study. Lectures typically last 1 hour and SGSs are 2 hours. Before preparing for each SGS, you will be required to read the relevant chapter handout and listen to the accompanying lecture. You will then be required to undertake the preparation detailed in the SGS description. This preparation might require you to, for example research an area of law, prepare a presentation, draft a contractual clause, prepare a letter of advice and analyze a cause of action. \n SGSs involve a wide range of different learning and teaching techniques, combining individual and teamwork, and involving \n \n Presentations \n Mock hearings \n Negotiations \n Drafting exercises \n Problemsolving \n \n Classroom materials are drafted by our tutors who have worked in practice as qualified lawyers. This ensures that the practical activities undertaken in your SGSs are all in the context of realistic case studies which thoroughly prepare you for working in practice. \n Client portfolios \n You will be taught your core practice areas Business Law and Practice, Property Law and Practice and Civil Litigation, in the context of three particular \u2018clients\u2019. By considering three clients\u2019 businesses in this way, you will appreciate how their businesses operate as a whole and how decisions made in the context of a property or business transaction might impact upon ongoing litigation.

Using client portfolios also illustrates how clients are often represented by different departments within a firm, which closely replicates real life. \n In Stage 2 when you study your electives, you will act for a broad range of clients reflecting the diversity of experience in practice. This will continue to develop not only your legal acumen but also your commercial awareness. \n Admissions information \n Accreditation of Prior Learning APL \n BPTC students applying for the LPC may be eligible for exemptions and discounted fees when applying with APL. \n Successful graduates of the BPTC may be granted exemption from attendance and assessment in the following areas \n \n Stage 1 \u2013 Litigation, Advocacy, Drafting \n Stage 2 \u2013 Two vocational electives \n \n Successful BPTC graduates will be granted a 50% discount on LPC fees when applying with APL. This applies to students who completed the BPTC no earlier than five years prior to the date of their enrolment on the LPC. \n BPTC graduates are not required to have undertaken a pupillage; however, students pursuing this route will have to undertake a full training contract following the LPC. We will equip you with more than just legal knowledge we focus on the allaround legal skills and commercial awareness employers are seeking. The Postgraduate Diploma in Legal Practice, known as the Legal Practice Course LPC is your bridge between the academic world and professional life in a law firm. We are selected by these firms above other law schools because of the professional relevance of our education and the enviably high standard of our teaching, facilities, and materials.
