Jerry Belknap 1.0 out of 5 stars My wife used today and after about 10 minutes the water was pretty cool. However, they should maintain heat for the first 15 minutes. Water initially placed in the tub will drop about 5 degrees, thereafter it should maintain warmth for approximately 15 minutes. It says so in the instructions in the box. Yet in the products name says it heats water. The Amazon product description says this false claim too. Returning it. This foot spa is awesome. <http://gopherandsquirrelcontrol.com/admin/images/92-corvette-owners-manual.xml>

Its light weight even when filled with water and the vibration is very relaxing. My favorite part is the splash guard because I can paint her nails with ease when her feet are placed on top. I wouldve loved to have given it 5 stars but the water was definitely not heated, even in slightest amount. I poured in very warm water and it was not able to retain the temperature so theres not even the slightest chance that it could heat cooler water. But, for the price, its perfect. Im fairly picky when it comes to products and I really like this product. There are many reviews that mention how loud the foot spa is. I disagree. There is a small fan at the base of the foot spa, but that is for the bubble ambiance. There was one review that mentioned you couldnt even watch TV while using the spa. That review is really exaggerated. I gave my husband a pedicure today and we both watched TV and talked without any issue. If you choose not to buy this product because you are somehow convinced that it is loud, I think you are making a mistake. There are many reviews that mention the heat setting, or lack thereof. No, this foot spa does not heat water. We added warm water equivalent to a bath temperature and 30 minutes later the water was still warm. My husband says that if the water cooled, he couldnt tell. It is interesting to me that there are no reviews with actual temperature measurements. I plan on coming back to update this review next time we use the foot spa. Im going to actually put a thermometer in the water and take measurements. It will be fun to sort the accurate reviews versus those that are exaggerated. If you choose not to buy this product because you are convinced somehow that the water wont stay warm, I think you are making a mistake. This foot spa was comfortable for my husband to put his feet in it and then lean back. I think its important that you take that into consideration when choosing a foot spa.

If the backside wall is too high, you will have to sit at a 90 degree angle as the backside wall will press into the back of your ankles. This foot spa has the perfect backside height so you can lean back in a recliner. The foot spa has a foot in each corner. This prevents it from tipping and worked great. My husband would take his foot out and rest his heel on the blue lid and there was no wavering. I took a few photographs with measurements. A mans size 12 foot will fit in this spa just fine ladies, you know then that all of our feet will fit. My 12inch ruler fit into the bottom, with about an inch more to spare. A mans size 13 would fit, but anything bigger would not be comfortable. The width of the foot spa is about 12 inches. Im really happy with this product. For the price, I think it is a great product. To size it out, Im a mens 13 shoe size, and I have a little room left over, so youll probably start having issues if you wear a mens 14 and up. It can be a bit awkward to carry when full of water. They dont cover it on the webpage, but in the instructions its pretty clear that this needs to be placed on a flat surface so that the air flow to the heating coils doesnt get disrupted, so its probably not ideal to place on thick carpet. To me the vibration was so-so. Theres been some debate about the heating capabilities with it. In my experience, it will delay the water getting cooler, but its not able to maintain the initial water temperature for very long. If all you need is something to soak your feet in, a dish tub would make an acceptable alternative. This left my foot semi swollen and in definite need a pedicure. I wasnt allowed to get one for a few months, however, so I purchased the Conair Foot Spa. I did my research, checked customer reviews and found that this one was the best product within the price range and it did not disappoint.

If youre looking for the absolute best product then youre not going to find it at this low of a price but if youre looking for a good foot spa that does the job then youve come to the right place. It stays mildly heated if you fill it with warm water and it also has a small, constant vibration. This foot spa is a great way to pamper yourself at home and on a budget! It arrived last week, and I just tried it yesterday, the so call masager, was weaker than a feather going through my feet. After 10 minutes, the water turn to 50 degree.I will try to find out how can I return it.Por otro lado, las burbujas se generan exactamente debajo de los pies, al poner los pies en la tina sobre los orificios por donde salen las burbujas, los orificios se tapan y las burbujas salen con mayor presion salpicando el agua fuera de la tina, el instructivo indica no llenar la tina sobre el nivel maximo indicado, sin embargo no se encontro ningun indicador de nivel. Totalmente decepcionado de la compra.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The water splashes a lot and makes a big mess. There is no fill line to guide how much water to put in. We kept removing water to get it to stop splashing out, but by the time we had taken the water out, the level was too low to provide much comfort. In addition, the bubbles are nice, but they dont keep the water cold. Even when using hot water to start, the temperature dropped quickly with the heated bubbles running. This product needs some refinements a spash guard and mabe some insulation to keep the temperature.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Highly recommend this product. The only downside is the water cools off pretty quickly, other than that the design and bubble action is great. Id give 5 stars if had a more powerful heater.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again I returned it the very next day.

The temperature doesnt work and I added a Little soap and everywhere was full of bubbles and also it is very loud. My household was not pleased with me while I was trying to use this at night. Dont even bother with this one.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Considerong the low price its a good buySorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Heating fonction does not work, even when you add warm water in it doesnt keep the water at the same temperature. Gets cold within 20min. Only pro i have size 13 feet and it fits comfortably.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The bubbles are too strong and the water splashes everywhere. The unit does NOT keep the temperature of the water. I found the temperature dropped fast. The massage attachments don't spin. What's the point Do yourself a favor and get a different foot spa.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Mettre un peu plus dargent pour un de qualite je dis.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The bubbles are as expected which is good but I ordered this because it had bubbles WITH vibration.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again It is complete waste of money as it does not of have vibration or heating. Hot water needs to be poured from outside source ex geyser or gas and a simple tub can be used for same instead of this costly tub.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Works decent for a quick soak, and it is easy to use; but I would suggest investing a little more money for a better one.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again I find it gets good if you apply pressure and make your feet part of the casing, this intensifies the vibrations.Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The machine was super loud and had a plastic burning smell after 5 mins and weird sound. I don't even know if it's safe to continue.

With vibrating nodes and heated water, the Conair Foot Spa promises a relaxing, fullfoot massage, but does it deliver. We ordered one and tested it out for a few weeks to see. Keep reading for our assessment of the foot spa's performance and decide for yourself if this is the at-home spa experience you need. Aside from finding a level, splash-friendly space to position it, all you have to do is snap the lavender splash guard onto the basin, plug it in, and fill it up with water. Make sure you don't surpass the MAX level indicator. If you're like us, the last thing you want to do when you're tired is fuss with your foot spa.

The Conair requires little effort—just pull it out, fill it up, grab a towel, and sit back and soak. Once you're finished, emptying the water is a seamless process as the streamlined foot spa weighs just 4.7 pounds. The brand's vibrating foot spa is made of durable plastic and complete with a pearly white basin, lavender base, and splash guard. The splash guard effectively prevents water spillage, while the reservoir comfortably coddles your feet. The same button also allows you to activate vibrations. As previously mentioned, the foot spa is lightweight and easy to carry from room to room, but its 7.5 x 16.6 x 14.6-inch design does take up more space than expected. On a positive note, the device's large footprint means it can accommodate shoe sizes up to a men's 13. There are three different types of nodes, so you can customize your massage by placing your feet in various areas. Soft, vibrating nodes grace the bottom of the foot spa; a pinpoint attachment for extra-deep massage rests in the middle of the purple plate above; and the splash guard features additional nodes so you can target your toes or heels. The scorching water we'd poured in was lukewarm before we got through one episode of The Good Place, which left our feet feeling like they were in a bad place. While this was annoying, the product listing does state that the foot spa is only intended to keep your water at its original temperature—so whether you put in cold, tepid, or hot water, the Conair won't heat it. Rather, it's supposed to just maintain your water temperature. We were looking forward to a soothing massage, but we found the Conair unable to effectively massage the pads of our feet. We felt the overall basin pressure was weak, while the pinpoint massage attachment was too spiky and rough. We weren't able to find much of a happy medium. If that's your main ask, though, you might not mind—especially if you add bath salts to make the experience a little more soothing.

Wipe it dry with a towel or let it air dry, and be sure to stay away from harsh soaps and detergents. If you plan to use essential oils or fragrant salts while you soak, just keep in mind it'll require a more thorough wipe-down. If you're looking for a basic foot spa that can support an occasional soak, it should do the trick. Instead of vibrating nodes, this model is outfitted with water jets and it heats the water while you soak. There's also a pumice stone in the center in lieu of Conair's pinpoint massage attachment. You can also set your preferred temperature, enable bubble jets, and when you're done, drain the water easily through the bottom of the device's basin. The Conair Foot Spa won't be replacing professional spa days anytime soon, but if you're looking for an inexpensive way to soak and soothe tired feet, it's likely worth it—especially if you can find it on sale. Frequently Asked Questions Conclusion Quick Comparison of the Best Foot Spas 2020 Here are our top five picks for the best foot spas on the market right now, with a quick comparison table listing all their key features. Title Editors Choice ACEVIVI Foot Spa Bath Massager with Massage Rollers and. Ivation Foot Spa Massager Heated Bath, Automatic Massage Rollers. Read our full reviews on the 10 best foot spas on the market right now 1. ACEVIVI Foot Spa Bath Massager Best Foot Spa Overall No matter what the category, a premium product is one that not only has all the features a user would need from it, but does each of them extremely well too. And while it does face some severe competition from the rest of the entries on this list, we believe the ACEVIVI foot spa more than deserves its top spot on our list, beating out even very well-known companies like Kendal, Conair, and HoMedics in this regard. This product has everything you could want from a foot spa, from the extremely basic features like adjustable heating and massaging rollers to the more sophisticated ones like a rotating pumice stone for pedicuring your feet and infrared light for sterilization. Even the massage rollers on this foot spa are quite sophisticated, offering two different kinds of massaging motions Tai Chi wheels on the four corners, and Corncob rollers in the middle to give you a better foot massage, based on foot acupuncture techniques. Add a folding bucket handle to the top, and you've got a spa that's pretty easy to carry around. For a product as good as this, it's quite hard to find something it doesn't do right. Which is why we were only able to come up with two legitimate concerns One, the ACEVIVI is pretty large size 17, and women with small feet can't seem to make full use of it, and two, the ACEVIVI doesn't have a remote, so you're going to have to bend down every time to change the settings. Otherwise, this is truly one great product.

Like the ACEVIVI, the Ivation foot spa covers all the basic features you'd require from a spa, with stellar heating features and oxygen bubbles for a smooth and relaxing experience. Of particular note is the central massager, which you can use to not only target the balls and heel of your foot for a good massage but also swap out with two other attachments for a different pedicure experience. And while the model does come with a pumice stone included, it's just a shame that it doesn't come in the form of an attachment, meaning you'd have to scrub your feet with the stone in your hands instead. While the lack of a proper pumice stone attachment is disappointing, the Ivation foot spa does make up for its shortcoming by providing a very solid foot spa. The build quality of this device is quite impressive, with many customers lauding it for its durability under rough use. You can even throw in bath salts and essential oils into this foot spa and rest easy knowing they won't mess up the foot spa in any way. In fact, had it not been for the lower quality massage and pedicure experience the Ivation foot spa provides, choosing the ACEVIVI foot spa as the best might have been very difficult indeed. The Kendal FB09 is also very easy to use, giving the user the ability to switch between built-in heating and massage modes with just the twist of a simple dial, which is great if you're not too picky about your heating and massage options, but restricting if you're someone who likes to finetune everything to the nth degree. The Kendal FB09 is also a pretty big foot spa, catering to the larger foot sizes with relative ease, and even letting you submerge your feet substantially higher than your ankles. Thankfully, the Kendal FB09 has a set of wheels at the bottom of the device, so rolling it around from the bathroom isn't a chore, nor is too much of a hassle to empty out the tub, thanks to a drainage pipe located towards the back. Watch this video on YouTube Buy on Amazon 4.

ArtNaturals Foot Spa Massager Best for Athletes and Athlete's Foot For extreme cases like wornout heel and even fungal infections of the feet, you need something that is equipped to take care of them thoroughly, and the ArtNaturals foot spa is just right for the job. Stretching your tight and stressed feet in the warm, bubbling bath provided by the ArtNaturals is just pure ecstasy, and no matter how sore your feet are, it's nothing a short session in the ArtNaturals foot spa can't fix. The foot spa is quite roomy, so you can move your feet around quite easily and thoroughly enjoy yourself, while the roller massagers at the base of each foot work towards easing the tension in your soles. And that's pretty great, especially when you're trying to relax the day's pain and stress away. However, when it comes to something as serious as Athlete's foot, a simple foot massage session isn't going to cut it, and this is where the ArtNaturals truly shines. With the option to add essential oils and bath salts geared towards curing athlete's feet, a soak in the ArtNaturals foot spa isn't just relaxing. It's also medicating. Well, in that case, something like Kendal Wave is your best bet for a foot spa experience that extends far beyond just your ankles. In fact, the Wave is so deep, it can easily submerge your legs up to the top of your shins, which is saying a lot. And for those who stretch their calves almost as much as their feet, being able to relax them in a warm bubbling bath can mean the difference between relaxed, rejuvenated legs and extremely sore shins, possibly leading to injury if not destressed.
